

To whom it may concern,

As the final lighting installation can affect the overall appearance of a hand trowelled resin floor finish we do not consider that normal temporary lighting is sufficient for carrying out works of such high value as resin flooring.

Similarly the slab and ambient temperature are critical to the workability and curing of the resin system – it is not feasible to heat industrial buildings with space heaters or the like.

In conclusion we would advise you that unless the final lighting and heating systems are installed the final appearance of the floor will suffer.
